UNIVERSITY MEDICAL COLLEGE

The establishment of a medical school had always been part of the plans of the University Corporation, but it was not until 1838-1839 that a real beginning was made. At several sessions of the Council in July, 1837, a number of names for the Professors for the chief branches of medical instruction were presented to the Council.

In December, 1837, a Special Committee, which had been appointed to consider the Faculty, through its Chairman, Charles Butler, made their report to the Council, and on December 6, 1838, a Faculty was elected, but the medical course was not organized on account of lack of means.

In 1841 the Medical School was organized by the Council of the New York University, electing the following as members of the Faculty: Valentine Mott, M. D., Professor of Surgery; Granville Sharp Pattison, M. D., Professor of Anatomy; John W. Draper, M. D., Professor of Chemistry; John Revere, M. D., Professor of Theory and Practice of Medicine; Martin Paine, M. D., Professor of Institutes of Medicine and Materia Medica; Gunning S. Bedford, M. D., Professor of Obstetrics and Diseases of Women and Children.

The enrolment for the first year showed a total of 239 students.

The Stuyvesant Institute at 659 Broadway, nearly opposite Bond Street, where now the Broadway Central Hotel stands, being at that time one of the finest buildings in the city, with the exception of the University and the Astor House, was purchased by the Professors for the Medical School. The instruction was carried on here until 1851, when the property was sold and a large and costly building on 14th Street, on the East side of the Academy of Music, near Third Avenue, was erected. This occupied a plot of ground 116 feet by 122½ feet and contained two museums and three lecture rooms, each capable of seating nearly six hundred people. In the opinion of competent judges it was then considered "the most complete medical college building in the country." The Faculty held their sessions in this building until the burning of the Academy of Music in the spring of 1866 destroyed it, together with valuable collections in Anatomy, Obstetrics, Chemistry, Materia Medica, Botany, Mineralogy, etc.

The Faculty then took up their quarters in the old New York Hospital, which then occupied the square between Broadway and Church Street and between Duane and Worth Streets. They rented one of the large edifices, but were obliged to abandon it in 1869 on account of the sale of the property for commercial purposes.

The College was removed to a new building at 426 East 26th Street, which had been erected and leased to the Faculty for a term of years by the late Mr. Cortlandt Palmer.

With the growth of the Medical School this building became too small, and in 1875 the Faculty erected a building at 410 East 26th Street, where instruction was continued until 1898.

BELLEVUE HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGE

Clinical instruction had been given in Bellevue Hospital by individual members of the Medical Board since 1847, and formal clinical lectures had been given in the amphitheatre which was opened on March 2, 1849. The first recorded suggestion of a distinct school of medicine in connection with Bellevue Hospital is found in the Minutes of the Medical Board under date of December 18, 1860. In accordance with the request of the Commissioners of Public Charities and Correction, a Committee from the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital was appointed to examine and report upon the various institutions situated on the Island under the control of the Commissioners. In their report to the Medical Board the Committee urged the importance of the Hospital having a medical school connected with it. The Medical Board directed the Committee to confer with the Commissioners in regard to the formation of such a medical college.

The conference resulted favorably to the proposed school. The Board of Commissioners were enthusiastic in their endeavors to increase the value of the charitable institutions by making them, in addition to their original purpose, subserve more completely the cause of medical education.

On March 30, 1861, the Commissioners notified the Medical Board that they would allow a college building to be erected upon the Hospital grounds. At the same meeting at which this permission was received, the question of the formation of the Faculty came up in the shape of an inquiry as to what members of the Medical Board were willing to connect themselves with the new college. Some members of the Board were already connected with medical schools, others did not care to undertake the duties of teaching, and yet others were prevented by important engagements. On the 2d of April chairs were assigned as follows: Stephen Smith, M. D., Principles and Practice of Surgery; Frank Hastings Hamilton, M. D., Surgery of Bones and Accidents; James R. Wood, M. D., Operative Surgery and Surgical Pathology; Alexander B. Mott, M. D., Surgical Anatomy; Lewis A. Sayre, M. D., Orthopædic Surgery; Isaac E. Taylor, M. D., Fordyce Barker, M. D., George T. Elliot, Jr., Obstetrics; Benjamin W. McCready, M. D., Materia Medica and Therapeutics; John William S. Gouley, M. D., Anatomy.

During the month of April the Faculty was completed by the following appointments: Austin Flint, M. D., Principles and Practice of Medicine; Austin Flint, Jr., Physiology; R. Ogden Doremus, M. D., Chemistry and Toxicology.

The first exercises of the college, as such, were short courses given during April and May, 1861, by Professors Wood and Hamilton. These lectures were attended by about two hundred practitioners and students.

During the following summer the first building of the college was erected, a circular issued, and preparations were made for the opening of the school. In June, 1861, Dr. Gouley resigned the chair of Anatomy, considering it his duty to remain in the army during the continuance of the war. Dr. Timothy Childs was called to fill the vacancy.

In the meantime the college had been incorporated.

The Commissioners were notified of this incorporation on the 8th of April, 1861, and, on the 11th, they passed the following preamble and resolutions:

"In consideration of the gratuitous services heretofore rendered, as well as the promised continuance of the same, by the Medical Board, and with a view of rendering a permanent, extended, and more valuable service to the living, it is

"Resolved, That permission be granted to the Trustees of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College to build and place under their charge, subject to the rules and regulations which now exist under the authority of this Board, a suitable building according to the plans submitted by Messrs. Post and Gambrill, architects, on the southerly part of Bellevue Hospital grounds.

"Resolved, That a meeting of the Trustees be held at No. 1 Bond Street, on Tuesday next, 16th instant, at four o'clock P. M., of which the incorporators be notified, and that they be represented by a committee or otherwise.

"SIMEON DRAPER, Pres.

"ISAAC BELL, JR.

"MOSES H. GRINNELL,

"JAMES B. NICHOLSON,

"Commissioners.

"Report accepted and resolutions adopted."

The first college building was erected on the Hospital grounds in the summer of 1861. The attendance on the college was so large that before the end of the first session the necessity of a larger building was felt. In the autumn and winter of 1866 the Commissioners of Charities erected a large building so arranged as to serve both the purposes of the College and the Bureau of Medical and Surgical Relief for Out-Door Poor (Dispensary). The upper floors of the building were leased to the Faculty for college purposes. In this building the college continued until the consolidation, when it moved to the new building on the Southwest corner of 26th Street and First Avenue connected with Carnegie Laboratory.

In 1884 Andrew Carnegie, Esq., gave a sum of money for the erection of a suitable building for laboratories for Physiology, Pathology, Therapeutics and other departments of Medicine. This building was built on East 26th Street, near First Avenue, around which the newer college buildings have been grouped. This laboratory was the first in this country in which systematic instruction was given to students in Pathology and Bacteriology.

UNIVERSITY AND BELLEVUE HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGE

The present Medical School of the New York University resulted from the consolidation of the University Medical College and the Bellevue Hospital Medical College in 1898. By this consolidation the Medical School became an integral part of the University and under University control.

The New College Building, situated on the corner of First Avenue and 26th Street, which was planned by the Faculty of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College in 1897, was transferred to the New York University. The Carnegie Laboratory, situated on East 26th Street, and communicating with the New College Building, was also transferred to the University.

These two buildings, with the temporary use of the old University Building on East 26th Street, opposite Bellevue Hospital, met the demands of the larger classes and increase in the curriculum. It also furnished suitable accommodations for the Clinic connected with the Medical School, in which over 100,000 patients are treated annually.

In 1904 a new Laboratory Building was erected on First Avenue, adjoining the main College Building. This was made necessary by the growth of the Dispensary, which demanded additional room, and the needs of the curriculum for more extended and complete laboratory courses.
